Chance to see another Natural Wonder – the Southern Lights!

Although Southern Lights happen all year round, the best time to see them in New Zealand is during the winter months (March to September), with clear sky and minimum light pollution. Lake Tekapo is in the Dark Sky Reserve, meaning it is internationally recognised as having some of the darkest skies in the world. You can get high in the mountains in these locations, like at the Mt John Observatory in Tekapo, to see some magical displays. Remember, look south!
